CARTE POSTALE.

Llyn Idwal lies in an elevated position, 1,200 feet above sea level, amid scenery which can only be described as the wildest and most bleak in Wales. It is situated in a hollow among the mountains, which was formed thousands of years ago by glacial action, its shores in some parts being most precipitous. Tradition has it that a certain Prince Idwal was drowned here by his foster-father, and in consequence no bird would fly across its waters.

Thanks for P.C. this morning. I can recall the person from Mrs Lewis' Glan-Heboc Llanrwst
